DEFINITIONS FOR ASPE DESIGN STANDARD COMMITTEE APPOINTMENTS

INTEREST

The perspective of a member of a committee, as judged by his or her present and past sources of income, fees, or reimbursements of related expenses, shall be viewed in the context of the purpose and scope of the committee. The perspective may also be judged by the recorded views of the individual, or of any organization he/she is employed by or receives income from, or of which he/she is a member.

INTEREST CATEGORIES

The principal (top) tier of interest classifications. For some projects, it may be appropriate to designate subcategories of one or more interest category. Following are examples of functions covered by each interest category:

Producer

Those directly concerned with the production or distribution of the product or service involved, including industry associations representing producers or distributors, or those receiving substantial support from a producer directly concerned.

User

Those who use the product or service involved, or those who receive substantial support from a user directly concerned, but are not involved with its production or distribution. This reference is not to users of the standard, but to users of the product or service covered by the standard.

General

Those who have interests other than those described above and may include consulting engineers or employees of appropriate government agencies, nationally recognized testing laboratories or educational institutions, and codes-oriented individuals.

Example subcategories of the user interest category include:

User-Consumer

A person using goods and services rather than producing or selling them, when the committee's activity deals with a consumer product such as a water heater.

User-Industrial

The industrial user of a product, where the committee's activity deals with an industrial product such as refrigerant chemicals.

User-Government

The representative of a government agency, where the committee's activity is likely to be used as the basis for government agency procurement such as for the design or performance testing of building systems or equipment.

User-Labor

A representative of labor, where the committee's activity deals with worker products used in the workplace or with the workplace environment.

Note: The subcategories shown are for example only. The ASPE Board of Directors may approve chairperson-recommended use of a) subcategories for any interest category, b) no subcategories at all, or c) different interest categories.
